

“The time is right to do what is right”

By Sean Pham, 6th grade

“The time is right to do what is right.” What does this mean? To me, this quote means that there is always time for us to do the right thing. One example is when someone needs help, and no one steps up to help them. The right thing to do in this situation is for a bystander to help that person. The important thing to learn from this scenario is that we should all help anyone at any time. From this, we should stop others from bullying, help people, and assist the poor or anyone who needs help.

“The time is right to do what is right.” What does this have to do with bullying? It means defending anyone at school or elsewhere. For example, a bully starts bullying your friend, and no one stands up to defend them. Having witnessed the incident, you are thinking about what you should do. There are two options you could use: A: you could stand back just like everyone else. Or B: you could step up and defend your friend. One could say: “Please stop!!!”. That would be the best approach. You don’t need to be physical and break any rules. The act of just standing up for your friend or anyone who needs help would be enough to do the right thing.

“The time is right to do what is right.” To save someone anytime, anywhere, and what does this have to do with this? It means to help anybody. Here is an example of this. So, you are taking a walk. Then you see someone kidnapping someone. The kidnapper is running your way. He tells you to move. You don’t know what you should do. What should you do? A: Move out of the way, let the kidnapper get away, and never see the kid again, or B: stop the kidnapper in his tracks and save the kid that the kidnapper took. The answer you should have chosen was B. This means helping anybody whenever they need help.

“The time is right to do what is right.” What does this quote have to do with helping the poor? Here is an example. Whenever you go to school, you always see a poor person. He is there every day, asking for money to survive. Most of the time, when people pass him, they look the other way and avoid giving him money. So, one day, your mom gave you some money for your allowance. You are deciding what you should do with the money. You’re thinking of not giving it to the poor guy. You are also thinking of just giving it to the poor guy as a nice gesture. The right thing to do here would be to give some of your allowance to the poor guy so that he can buy some food. This example means giving money to the poor.

In conclusion, doing the right thing is good. The meaning of “The time is right to do what is right” is to defend a friend, save somebody, and help the poor. It also means doing the right thing anytime, anywhere.
